Mrs. George J. She broke out all over her body with a humor, and we used everything recommended, but without results. I called in three doctors, they all claimed they could help her, but she continued to grow worse. Her body was a mass of sores, and her little face was being eaten away; her ears looked as if they would drop off. Neighbors advised me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and before I had used half of the cake of soap and box of ointment the sores had all healed, and my little one's face and body were as clear as a new-born babe's. There were also traces of arsenic and the physicians opinion was that this might have been contained in the tinned food or might have been taken with water drunk at the mine where Mr. Williams had been working. There was no suspicion that the poison, whatever it was, was taken by other than an accidental manner.

Bill of Exceptions Ready.

The bill of exceptions in the Hamer-Howell contest case involving the district judgeship of the Second judicial district was settled last night by Judge Charles W. Morse and ordered filed with the supreme court. The ballots of Weber, Davis and Morgan counties cast in the election og 1904, and which were recented during the progress of the trial, were inspected by the court and a record was made to show that they were sealed in the condition in which they were left at the time of the trial.

WOOLEN MILLS CLOSE.

as the Cause.

Provo, Sept. 14.—The directors of the Provo Weollen Mills company have decided to close the mills for an indefinite period, till such a time as there is a change in the market for woollen goods. The demand in the east, where the company makes its principal sales is now for worsteds and not for wool goods and the company has not the machinery for the manufacture of worsteds. The switching from woolens to worsteds. The switching from woolens to worsteds have caused a large number or eastern customers to countermand orders given to the mills for woolens through the eastern agents of the company, and the agents write that the market is in greatily demoralized condition. With the high price of wool and lack of demand for the woolens the directors decided that the only safe course to pursue was to stop work for a time, at least, as to buy wool at 25 cents a pound for 1906 with the conditions now existing as to the sale of the product of the mills would be extremely risky.

Manager Bassett states that many woolen factories in Oregon and California have closed for the same reason, and that no forecast can be made as to when the mills will start up again. This all depends upon the state of the market. The employes are now gradually being discharged as the work in hand in the various departments is finished, and it is expected that all work will stop in about three weeks. This will throw about 175 people out of employment and will cause some financial inconveniences to them and be felt in business circles here generally, till such a time as readjustments are made and other employment found by the operators. The woolen mills were built in the early seventies under the direction of President Brigham Young, with the intention mainly of manufacturing the wool raised in the territory, and supply the home market. This proved a great benefit to the people of the territory, enabling them to obtain clothing cheaper than they otherwise would have been able to do, and giving them a market for their wool. In the course of years the wool. In the course of years the home market for the product of the mill fell off, as cheaper goods were brought here from the east and for many years the bulk of the output has been sold in eastern markets. A good demand has been created for the goods and, but for the change in the demand of consumers from woolens to worsteds the prospects for a continuous prosperous business were good. The company has never paid very large dividends, and for years paid none at all, but the business has been of great benefit to Provo and to the state, especially in the earlier days were the benefits generally distributed and appreciated. Marriage licenses have been issued to the following couples: Vera Larson, aged 21, and Lydia Chadwick, aged 21, both of American Fork. When some of the newspapers were printing funny stories about William Loeb, private secretary to President Roosevelt, during the last campaign, alleging that he was the "champion blametaker in America," because he was always willing to assume responsibility for anything that went wrong at the White House, Mr. Loeb laughed with the very men who wrote the yarns.

But, one day his patience was taxed. The president's train had been delayed seven hours between Philadelphia and New York while he was going to Oyster Bay. The next morning one of the New York dailies had these flaming headlines; "President's Train Waterbound—Loeb Not to Blame." (Success.)
